Military Star(r) Card Gas Discount to Increase by 60 Percent

DALLAS – Army & Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) gas stations worldwide are helping take the pain out of the pump by increasing discounts for drivers using a Military Star(r) Card.

Beginning August 8, pumps currently programmed to reflect a discount of three cents a gallon for drivers who pay with a Military Star(r) Card will jump to five cents a gallon.

In addition to the everyday nickel discount, AAFES will periodically be offering increased savings opportunities at specified times throughout the year. The first of these promotions, from Aug. 21-23, will provide a 20 cents per gallon discount, up to 20 gallons, for drivers paying with a Military Star(r) Card.

"The savings opportunities are going to be unprecedented," said AAFES' Chief Operating Officer Mike Howard. "I'm excited about the exclusive gas savings we're going to offer Military Star(r) cardholders in the coming months."

Authorized exchange shoppers can learn more about the benefits available to Military Star(r) cardholders at www.aafes.com.
